

CAMILLOCROMO in "MUSIC FOR CHARLATANS, DANCERS AND TABARIN"

A show with music and theater

A crazy splinter group or clever fools? Musicians or Charlatans?

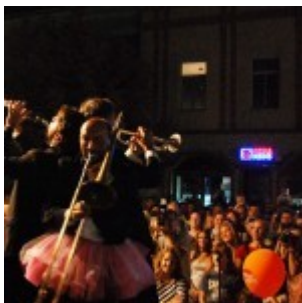

These dilemmas are still puzzling reviewers all over the world. The enticing and infectious phenomenon called Camillocromo is now spreading everywhere, but the secret of its success still remains hidden and well kept. Avoiding definitions and labels, "Music for Dancers, Charlatans and Tabarin" continues its merry-go-round among the theaters and squares in Italy, even crossing into the more exotic parts of Europe, rewarding the audience with great laughs and unforgettable evenings.

An orchestra of six tuxedo wearing musicians will carry you away into an old time musical atmosphere, with circus overtones and Fellini-like colors, presenting a concert-show full of surprises and of sensational turns.

Swing, tango, valzer, Balkan sounds, all meet within the original composition created by the Camillocromo bizarre minds. The foot beats, one would like to dance....but, no chance! The six characters captivate the audience, carrying everybody away into an imaginary Tabarin, with daringly wild attractions and a comical-oniric delirium, like in a vaudeville of old.

Then another dilemma arises: is it Music or Theater?

The answer is unpredictable, imagining is not sufficient... you should have the pleasure of finding out!
